A: Your script is doing too much without the author's knowledge. They are not properly handling what is going on. Specifically: In your first i loop, you're printing out each result in the while loop. This can be better handled by breaking after each iteration, which in your case is after it reads something. So, in the script, you would then want to do this (and every time after this): $result=$sql->fetch_object(); You're then overwriting your $result variable with each iteration in the while loop. This can also be safely changed by doing this: $result=$sql->fetch_object(); In the beginning of your while loop, you are printing a bunch of variables of each loop. You don't need to print these variables, you're just serving as a distraction for the reader. Printing these variables should be done right after the while loop. So, your above lines would change to this: echo "Product Name: ". $result->product_name; echo "Product Code: ". $result->product_code; echo "Model Number: ". $result->model_no; echo "Product Description: ". $result->product_desc; echo "Brand: ". $result->brand; echo "UPC Number: ". $result->upc_no; echo "Sales Price: ". $result->price_sales; echo "Discount: ". $result->discount; Now, most of that can be made much cleaner. You're already gathering the info out of the database using the prepare() method, and the fetch() method. This would make that much cleaner in your while loop: //Gather all of the relevant info out of the database if ($sql->prepare("SELECT * FROM products WHERE userID = :userID LIMIT 1")) { if ($sql->bind_param("i", $userID)) { if ($sql->execute()) { if ($sql->bind_result($product_name, $product_code, $model_number, $product_desc, $brand, $supc_no, $price_sales, $discount)) { while ($result=$sql->fetch()) {
