Quantitative determination of nitroprusside in human serum by capillary gas chromatography-thermospray mass spectrometry. A method is described for the identification and quantification of nitroprusside (NP) in serum by using gas chromatography-thermospray mass spectrometry. NP was extracted from serum after acidification and derivatized with sodium 2-(3,4,5-trimethoxyphenyl)isonicotinate. Following high-performance liquid chromatography, the mass spectra were recorded in a single ion monitor mode. Fragmentation characteristics of NP were investigated by using low- and high-mass (m/z) resolution. The limit of detection is 2 ng/mL. The linearity of the method is at least 0.1-100 ng/mL for NP. News Attendance Allowance The Attendance Allowance is a tax-free payment given to young people in receipt of Income Support. It is tax free and has to be claimed on their tax return. What is it? Attendance Allowance (AA) is a benefit for young people who are working at or have been placed at secondary or further education or training. Who can claim it? You can receive the Attendance Allowance if you are under 18 years old, are entitled to Income Support, and are working towards an employment goal. It can be claimed if you or your partner are: in full or part-time education; a full-time student who is continuously attending classes for more than 25 hours a week; engaged in a training activity where you are working towards a career goal; or on placements at institutions of higher education or training. There is a limit on how much you can get per week, as shown below. Note: All young people placed at school are entitled to receive the same (double) benefit. This amount is shown separately below. What is the benefit paid for? The benefit is paid when 3da54e8ca3
